Changing Schools

Frequent moving to new duty stations is a fact of military life, and your child will be asked to respond to the routines and demands of military life as well. Being prepared to help your school-age children change schools can go a long way to helping them adjust to their new environment in healthy ways. Parent preparation can mean a smooth school move for your children from one school system to the next.

Immediate enrollment

When leaving your school district, you can get your child's unofficial records to carry to your new school. Your student will be able to enroll without delay, even before the official transcript arrives. If your child needs additional immunizations, you can enroll and take care of these requirements within 30 days.

EFMP also recommends that you hand carry your child's IEP (or 504 plan) to present to their new school upon registration. This will help to start the process as soon as you get to your new school.

Your School Liaison can assist with your child's school transition

Your School Liaisons are your primary point of contact for all school-related matters, especially a school transition. The School Liaison at your current installation can connect you to your new installation School Liaison who will help smooth the transition to your child's new school. This local resource has well-established relationships with school administrators, district officials and state departments of education and can help with transition needs. School Liaisons understand the military experience and are here to help. Let your School Liaison help you and your family navigate school selection and youth sponsorship during this time of change. The School Liaison here on MCBH, Amy Solomon, can be reached by phone at (808) 496-2019.

School Liaisons can assist with:

- School options and programs
- School and community information
- Information on the interstate compact
- Youth programs inside and outside of school

You can also call Military OneSource to connect to an education consultant for help with everything from tutors to tuition. Don't wait until the move occurs. Call 800-342-9647 or set up a live chat today.

Mālama

To care for or Protect

Mālama — is the value of taking care of, or protecting. Mālama relates to our environment, culture, each other, ourselves, and everything with which we interact. It's about honoring our connection with nature, culture and our community.
